Hoar division at Tuskegee

Birmingham's Hoar Program Management, a division of Hoar Construction, will manage new construction and renovation projects at Tuskegee University.

Hoar Program Management won the contract after handling projects at Margaret Murray Washington Hall and Logan Hall. The two-year contract will include projects in program and design development stages and projects currently under construction.

"We have launched a new era and are striving for a pathway to pre-eminence for Tuskegee University," Dr. Gilbert L. Rochon, Tuskegee University president, said in a release. "As with other institutions of higher learning, this includes upgrading the university's physical facilities."

Hoar Program Management works with clients in the health care, institutional, retail, commercial, and industrial markets and currently has projects in 14 states.
